The Robert McClory Bike Path Greenway Corridor Enhancement Plan

The Robert McClory Bike Path is one of Lake County's existing regional paths that runs north and south through the eastern part of the county from Cook County to the Wisconsin state line. The path travels through several communities along Lake Michigan, links to other regional bikeways including the Grand Illinois Trail, and connects to the Illinois Beach State Park, other parks and forest preserves. The path is also within close proximity to several Metra stations along the eastern portion of the county. Lake County has jurisdiction of the path from the state line to IL RTE 137 and also within the City of Highwood. The remaining portions of the path fall under the jurisdiction of the Village of Lake Bluff, the City of Lake Forest, and the City of Highland Park. The Robert McClory path appears on the Northeastern Illinois Regional Greenways and Trails Plan and was also recently designated by AASHTO as a part of US Bike Route 37 in May of 2014.

The path is underutilized in areas and we would like to create a greenway corridor plan to enhance attributes of the path and the path right-of-way to encourage transportation and recreation use. By engaging residents, path users, and our community partners, we can develop a plan to improve path safety, beautify the path right-of-way, add way-finding signage and respite areas, promote local connections to the path and access to transit, and curb illegal uses/path property encroachments. We envision that the Greenway Corridor Enhancement Plan would ultimately be implemented in phases through several projects. Increasing use of the path promotes several key components of GO TO 2040 such as improving livability and regional mobility in communities along the path. Lake County, the Village of Lake Bluff, the City of Lake Forest, and the City of Highland Park are seeking assistance to engage the public and our communities to develop the Robert McClory Bike Path Greenway Corridor Enhancement Plan.
