Get on board for the Regional Indicators Project

Take a trip with us to your community's future... Sit in the driver's seat, and imagine your dashboard has gauges to measure all the significant indicators of progress toward sustainable regional prosperity.

The Regional Indicators Project is part of CMAP's innovative GO TO 2040 comprehensive planning campaign. To develop and evaluate strategies for implementing the GO TO 2040 regional vision, we're working with partners to create indicators for predicting and measuring economic, environmental, social, and cultural variables that affect quality of life.

An upcoming series of workshops is your chance to weigh in. What gauges do you want on your dashboard? Employment rates? Foreclosure rates? Air quality? Traffic congestion? Water supply? Others?

Imagine being able to choose the gauges most valuable to you and your community. And imagine having access to up-to-date information about each with the click of a mouse. Then being able easily to tabulate, analyze, or map the data. CMAP is developing exactly that type of web interface to facilitate access for local officials, planners, and other decision makers.

Let your voice be heard at a GO TO 2040 indicators workshop

Who should attend:

- Mayors and managers
- Administrators and assistant administrators
- Planning directors
- Public works directors
- Health and human services specialists
- Environmental specialists
- Transportation specialists
- Economic and community development specialists

Agenda Overview

- Welcome & Introductions
- Overview of The Regional Indicators Project
- Prioritization of Indicators
- Questions & Answers
- Wrap-up

This summer, please plan to attend any of the 90-minute workshops that CMAP is hosting around the region to gather input from experts like you. Your feedback is critical to determining which indicators are most valuable to you and your community.
